How will Catherine claim a beautiful, but neglected home and evict the troubled spirits that linger there bickering and battling over past sins? She'll ferret out their secrets; listen to the ghostly woman in blue who haunts her dreams; and face the attempts to drive her out with courage, determination, and the aid of a gorgeous local sheriff and a striking calico cat. Catherine Longford has spent her life running from conflict. Happiest alone and immersed in her own private world of design and sculpture, she hopes to create a solitary and tranquil life for herself in a secluded canyon. But her attempts to distract herself from the painful memories of an unfaithful ex-husband and a neglected and lonely childhood are ruined when she's drawn into a battle of wills with the five troubled ghosts that linger there. They will use her curiosity, tenacity, and stubbornness to solve the mysteries of the canyon house. Dragged into their struggles Catherine will be forced to face her own loneliness and fear of betrayal as she finds herself falling for a handsome and charming sheriff. From the day Catherine moves in, the ghosts whisper and plot. Jennifer haunts her dreams. Jeffrey and Andrew linger in the dark basement and the dusty attic attempting to drive her away with nasty pranks. John and Marilyn drift through the house bickering constantly as they struggle to protect her. When the sound of terrible weeping in her attic awakens Catherine in the middle of the night, she calls the local sheriff, Ted Roland. Ted finds no evidence of an intruder and dismisses her fears as the product of a nightmare, but he soon realizes that the house is truly haunted and Catherine could be in real danger. Ted joins Catherine and her exotic calico cat on a wild, dangerous, and romantic journey as they work to discover the secrets of the Canyon House.
