In this book, the author portrays an imaginary time table of dollar crashing and the consequence of global market meltdown. He holds that ""New World Order"" will appear on the surface at the next decade, and refers to its possible influence on nations, business and individuals. It might be more important to let investors know how to survive in the upcoming economic crisis, and make them find a rational position in the coming global transformation. The author believes that we can make profits in investing if we change anticipation and put investment in accordance with the reality. He suggests that investors fund sustainable global assets and social responsible investment, including natural resources, or the currency based on technology that can promote sustainable resources, and food resources. We should understand that the era of anti-action, and making others run our business has gone away.
