TO give the pleasure of laughter and to teach how to create laughter is the dual object of this small volume. For those who ask of it only that it amuse them, it offers the fine siftings of thousands of quips, jests, and brief anecdotes that have appeared in the American humoristic press, and in some foreign publications, during the last twelve months, together with smile-provokers that have been sent to the compiler or that he has heard vis-a-vis or in the small circle or in the public audience. This collection accurately mirrors American contemporaneous taste in humor.
