There have been books written about love letters in the literary sense, generally compilations of love letters from the past since it seems that one to five hundred years ago was their heyday both because people en masse in the Western World were just beginning to learn how to read and write in their native tongues on their own plus the fact that there was no media or telephones around.

People had the time and inclination to sit around and compose long, flowing, starry-eyed love letters to each other especially if they were separated by distance.

They couldn't just pick up the phone and talk to their lover so they wrote impassioned love letters, many of which are still around today, some preserved in books about love letters. For literary books about love letters, try #808.693 or PN6140 at the library.

Here Are Some Love Letters

Here are some snippets from love letters.

To Jane

The keen stars were twinkling,
and the fair moon was rising among them, Dear Jane.
The guitar was tinkling,
But the notes were not sweet
till you sung them again.
As the moon's soft splendour
O'er the faint cold starlight of Heaven is thrown,
So your voice most tender
to the strings without soul had then given its own.
Percy Bysshe Shelley

Marie! Marie!

Oh let me repeat that name a hundred times,
A thousand times over;
For three days now it has lived within me, oppressed me, set me afire.
I am not writing to you, no, I am close beside you. I see you, I hear you.
Eternity in your arms, Heaven, hell,
All is within you and even more than all.
Oh, leave me free to rave in my delirium.
1834, Franz Liszt to Marie d'Agoult

I have a wicked tongue, a deadly pen and a cold heart ... I shall be angry with myself tomorrow for sending you this ... Is it not outrageous? Burn it. Do not read it. Alas, it is too late. You have read it.

George Bernard Shaw to Alice Lockett

Mary, you are the only person in the world with whom I feel wholly at home. The bond between you and me is greater than either of us knows. Between us the bond can't be broken. May life sing in your heart and may life keep you in her most sacred heart.

Kahlil Gibran, love letter to Mary Haskell

You have the great gift of understanding, beloved Mary. You are a life-giver, Mary. My knowing you is the greatest thing in my days and nights, a miracle. That which is between us is like the Absolute in Life – everchanging, evergrowing. You and I, Mary, understand each other's larger self; and that to me is the most wonderful thing in life.

Kahlil Gibran, love letter to Mary Haskell

Everything real in life is based on need; just so far as you need me I have you tightly in my arms; beyond that I am only a luxury.

1898, George Bernard Shaw to Ellen Terry

We fluctuate long between love and hatred before we can arrive at tranquility.

Heloise, letter to Peter Abelhard, 1122

I'm not at all the sort of person you and I took me for.

Jane Carlyle, letter to Thomas Carlyle, May 7, 1822

I love you so passionately that I hide a great part of my love, not to oppress you with it.

Marie de Rabutin-Chantal, 1671, in Letters of Mme. De Sevigne to Her Daughter and Her Friends

I hope you have lost your good looks for while they last any fool can adore you and the adoration of fools is bad for the soul. No, give me a ruined complexion and a lost figure and sixteen chins on a farmyard of crow's feet and an obvious wig. Then you shall see me come out strong.

George Bernard Shaw to Mrs. Patrick Campbell

My dear girl! I love you ever and ever and without reserve. The more I have known you the more have I loved. In every way – even my jealousies have been agonies of love, in the hottest fit I ever had I would have died for you. I have vexed you too much. But for love! Can I help it? You are always new. The last of your kisses was ever the sweetest; the last smile the brightest; the last movement the gracefulest ... no ill prospect has
