PCs aren't just for grown-ups anymore. Today, more than half of the homes in America have family PCs. This book is a fun, hands-on, weekend-based tutorial that walks parents and children through the steps of accessing and navigating the Net for fun and information. Interactive tutorials are included for all members of the family—young children, teens, parents, and grandparents. Specific examples are provided for school and home use, and there's even a Web-based scavenger hunt that helps readers test their skills. Plus, a comprehensive glossary defines all the Internet terms.
