Bus from Oaxaca (One Writer's Big Innings: Literary Series Book 3) Robert Clark Young Traveling across Mexico, Robert Clark Young must contend with a murderous bus driver, an avalanche, a little blood on his suitcases, a primitive band of gringo "shroomheads," and, Biblically enough, a plague of toads that stretches as far as the sunset. But his greatest nemesis may be in the seat next to him.

"Bus from Oaxaca" won First Place in the New Millennium Writings Nonfiction Contest. And with good reason--this essay may be the funniest (and most harrowing) 7,000 words in all of travel literature.

"I read it on the subway. I howled with laughter the whole way."

--Michael Leone, literary critic, essayist, traveler

Robert Clark Young lives in San Diego, where he has been the primary caregiver for his parents since 2008, when they both suffered serious strokes. All of the royalties from his stories and essays on Kindle go to provide his parents a life of dignity and freedom in their own home. Thank you for downloading "Bus from Oaxaca."
